Retiring San Jose Sharks President Greg Jamison received one of what I'm sure will be many farewell accolades Wednesday evening as the Silicon Valley Capital Club added him to its Wall of Fame.

Carl Cookson, chairman of the club's selection committee, said the wall was started a few years back to honor club members who have made a significant impact on the South Bay.

A few previous honorees, including Pat Dando, Bob Kieve and Leigh Weimers, were on hand to welcome Jamison into their ranks.

Lots of Jamison's friends (and Sharks fans) came for the ceremony, including two San Jose mayors -- Chuck Reed and Tom McEnergy.

Jamison joked that he might have to start paying his membership dues in installments now that he's on the verge of being unemployed.

"Season tickets work fine," Capital Club General Manager Bruce MacKenzie retorted.

BLUESY OPENING: What better way to celebrate the opening night of "Black Pearl Sings!" and the San Jose Rep's 30th anniversary season than with the blues?

Local blues band Pearl Alley, fronted by CreaTV Executive Director Suzanne St. John-Crane, performed before Wednesday's show at the Hammer Theatre Center.

Theatergoers got to take part in a post-show celebration, too, where they hung out with the cast and crew with Bijan Bakery desserts and J. Lohr wine.

"Black Pearl Sings!" runs through Sept. 26. Ticket information is available at www.sjrep.com or by calling 408-367-7255.

SEASON SKATES BY: The Silicon Valley Roller Girls hold their last home doubleheader of the season, "United We Skate," Saturday at San Jose Skate on Blossom Hill Road.

The Roller Girls' two teams, the Dot.Kamikazes and the KillaBytes, are donating part of the proceeds to Career Closet, a nonprofit that outfits women re-entering the work force with business attire.

You can also bring donations of work-appropriate accessories such as scarves, shoes and handbags to the game. For more information, visit www.svrollergirls.com.

The Roller Girls also are looking for art submissions to auction off at a wine-tasting fundraiser at the Grapevine in Willow Glen. The art needs to be horror-themed or roller-derby-related, as the fundraiser is also a Halloween costume party on Oct. 26.

If you want to donate a piece of art, you can reserve a spot in the auction by sending an e-mail to community@svrollergirls.com.
